Just personally I never knew when quizes & summaries were due. Though it was on the syllabus, by this point I was used to instructors at least mentioning when out of class work was due. So a heads up would be nice.

3) Additional comments and/or clarification of previous ratings.

I knew code at about a 2/10. Feel I am at a 8 now understanding what was covered.

Awesome professor. I've learned more from Johnson than any other professor I've had these last 4 years. Very helpful. Gives great criticism. His lectures help ~~him~~ you understand better since he walks the class through all the steps.

I knew a minimal amount from taking typography. I have learned a ton this semester. It has been a lot of fun.

Nothing, I thought it was a great class, not so fond of the chapter summaries though, haha.

Written Comments

1) What were some of the positive aspects of the way this course was taught? Please be specific and constructive.

It was very hands on - Mostly just working w/ the code w/ lots of one-on-one help from the prof.

2) What suggestions do you have for improving the way this course was taught? Please be specific and constructive.

Too many people in the class to have much one-on-one — good concept for teaching but difficult to execute well because of this. Perhaps in the future allow for smaller class size w/ a limit on registration slots.

Felt that some concepts were out of the prof's grasp as somewhat limiting in what one can do w/ code when you have to figure it out on your own.

3) Additional comments and/or clarification of previous ratings. → before class

How much code did I know? I'd put myself at a S[redacted] — basics of HTML + CSS, with lots of room to improve.
